Rev. and Mrs. Mitchell very pleasantly entertained the teachers at a six o'clock dinner last week Wednesday evening.

District Meeting of Danish-Lutheran Ministers.

The ministers of the Danish-Lutheran churches of this district held their regular quarterly meeting in this city last Sunday and Monday, Oct. 10th and 11th. This meeting in the Danish language is termed the "Kredsmode."

The meeting opened Sunday morning, when the regular services were held at the Danish-Lutheran church, at which Rev. Kr. Ostergaard of Muskegon delivered a splendid sermon, and holy communion was administered by Rev. Holst of Ludington.

In the afternoon the congregation gathered at Danabod hall, where L. C. Bundgaard, the local gymnastic instructor opened a lively discussion on gymnastics and outdoor sports and their relation to the home, school and church. Several present took part in this, and it proved to be very interesting to all.

At 5:00 o'clock supper was announced, which was served by the members of the Danish Young People's Society in the basement. Vases of cut flowers adorned the tables for the guests and the supper was pronounced as splendid by those present.

In the evening services were held at the church and were largely attended. At this Rev. Peter Rasmussen of the Ashland college at Grant, presided. This closed the day's proceedings.

On Monday morning at 9:00 o'clock the ministers met with Rev. Kjolhede at the parsonage and held a private business meeting. Later several auto loads drove to Lovells and were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Rasmus Hanson at an excellent dinner served at the Douglas House. The trip to Lovells was made by way of Frederic making a trip of twenty-five miles and on returning a different route was taken, which was a two miles longer drive, so as to enable the out-of-town guests to behold some of the fine scenery on these roads. It was regretted that Rev. Rasmussen could not remain for dinner, but had to take the noon train at Lovells to continue on his lecture trip. It was a beautiful day and the outing was enjoyed very much.

The meeting was ended that evening, when final services were held at the church. Rev. Stockholm of Juhl gave a very interesting sermon and several short speeches were given by others present. Those present from out-of-town were Rev. and Mrs. Kr. Ostergaard of Muskegon, Rev. and Mrs. Peter Holst of Ludington, Rev. Peter Rasmussen of Grant, Mich., Rev. Stockholm of Juhl and Mr. Bovbjerg of Nevada. Mrs. Stockholm of Juhl, who had planned on being present at the meeting, was detained at Milwaukee.

In all it was a very successful and interesting meeting as well as an enjoyable one.

Opening of Grayling Gymnasium Last Week.

Some people call Grayling a "dead place" and others seem quite satisfied with what there is. Whatever we say in that connection is wrong. Grayling is no "dead place" and, seeing from the other point of view, we can not be satisfied with what we have. We have enough things going on to take up our time, but half of these things are not really adding anything to help the human race to live better, to be stronger in character and will power. Young people, who join hands for a worthy cause, is what will uplift the race. The gymnasium is for the sake of giving the young people a good place to spend their time and give something in return that is worth more than gold. "The man who owns a beautiful and well developed body owns the greatest treasure on earth," said a French pedagog some years ago. If we today could understand what that means, there would be no need to worry about the spending of our time in useless things.

A young man said to me: "Well, where the H— are you going to go?" when I told him he should not throw his time away at the movies and pool rooms four to six nights a week. I told him (and I have said it to many others) that he should stay at home, read some good books, take up some useful study in some correspondence school if he was an employe, and then spend his time at the gymnasium whenever he was going out. If my words did mean anything, then I would go around to every home in Grayling and tell the people about the recreation movement, the boy question and physical training for character building. If the gymnasium will have a good year, we will see the result here in another year.

If young people in Grayling want to take something that is good this winter, then make yourselves members of the gymnasium club, and you will later be glad of it.

As last week's program was not very plain, I shall give you some idea of what will be done to start with. It would be a great pleasure to get a big business class this winter, and in order to give everybody a chance to taste gymnastics, for older men, the first three Mondays in October will be free for all men over thirty-five years old. Wednesday night is for young men. Team games will be played after gymnastics in order to develop all into teams and later on organize as many as there is members into various clubs, which, during the winter will meet each other playing after schedule. Long ball, basket ball and indoor baseball will be the principal games for men. Friday night is for the girls. The games which will be used in the girls' classes will be mostly volleyball, dodge ball and basket ball. Saturday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock will be for children from the ages of seven to twelve. On account of so many different ages together last year, some small children did not get what they should have because the older ones did not consider themselves children. This will be bettered. Send your children, please. It will be free to all children in that age for the month of October. No suit is needed. Games of various kinds will fill those hours. All other classes start at 7:30.

L. C. Bundgaard, Instructor.

Grayling Hot Steam Bath House.

In visiting the south side of our city no one should miss the opportunity of calling at the steam bath house conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Adam Hydyalinen. This is the only one of its kind in Grayling and should be frequented by many.

On entering from the street you are conducted into an ante-room, which is equipped as a sort of a dressing room and in which the patron is made ready for the bath. The bath room itself opens directly out of this ante-room and is a large nearly square apartment, being about 14 ft. long and 18 ft. wide. One is first impressed upon entering by the peculiar though not disagreeable odor of a pile of birch boughs, still retaining their leaves, which, having come in contact with the steam, have the scent of herbs. The attention is then attracted to a large furnace, which seems to be built directly into the wall, only one side being visible, and extending nearly the entire length of the room, into which furnace is thrown water, which issues forth in great clouds of hot air. This process is continued until the room slowly fills and the temperature has reached the desired degree. On the other side of the room directly opposite the furnace, a large wide shelf is built into the wall, on this the bather reclines and the hot air is fanned over the body by the use of the birch boughs which we have before mentioned.

Another feature of the bath house is the spray, for the use of shower baths. A large bath tub occupies another part of the room and completes the furnishings.

It is indeed an exceedingly interesting apartment, besides being a very novel idea, and even though you do not desire the baths, both Mr. and Mrs. Hydyalinen are very congenial people and are glad to welcome visitors at any time.

Those who derive the most good from the baths are the people suffering from neuralgia, rheumatism and other such ailments. Even though one's health is in a normal condition the baths will be found to be exhilarating and pleasant.

HIGH WATER MARK IN REGISTRATION

STAT. UNIVERSITY PASSES GOAL
SET FOR ATTENDANCE.

GREATER THAN LAST YEAR

Almost Six Thousand Students Are On Campus While Extension Courses and Summer School Bring Number to 7,532.

Ann Arbor—Registration in the University of Michigan at the closing time Saturday had totaled 6,855, which is 92 more than the total registration of the entire university last year, exclusive of summer school and extension courses given for credit.

Inasmuch as registrations already reported for extension work in Grand Rapids, Saginaw and Detroit are equal to the entire registration in extension work last year, there is no fear of a falling off in this branch of university work, and as summer school this last summer totaled 1,677 as against 1,600 the year before, the 7,200 mark, set as a goal for attendance this year, has already been passed without depending upon registrations during the second semester at all.

The registrations in the different departments to date are: Literary college, 2,876, or 324 more than at a corresponding date last year and 53 more than last year's total literary college enrollment; engineering college, 11,489, eight more than last year at a corresponding date; medical department, 325, 16 more than last year in 1914-1915; law school, 418, 70 less than at a corresponding date 1914; pharmacy college, 115, or two more than 1914 total; homeopathic college of medicine, 85, loss of 10; dental college, 348, or 25 more than total registration last year; graduate school, 229, one ahead of a corresponding date last year. Total now on campus, 5,855. Total, including summer school registration, 7,532.

This figure will be further increased by the figures from the extension course classes.

NEW SCHOOL LAW OBSERVED

Declaration of Independence Is Read in Schools Tuesday.

Lansing—Approximately 600,000 public school children in 8,749 school houses in Michigan got something in their daily studies Tuesday that they were not looking for, namely, the reading of the Declaration of Independence. This was done in pursuance of the bill passed by the legislature of 1915, known as the Koehler act, compelling the reading of the famous document on certain holidays. Columbus day is one of the holidays mentioned. In addition to Tuesday the declaration will have to be read on all other state and national holidays during the school year when schools are in session.

Would Make Washtenaw Dry.

Ann Arbor—Petitions signed by more than 3,000 voters of Washtenaw county were presented Monday to the board of supervisors here, requesting submission of the local option question in this county at the spring election.

The state law pertaining to the submission of the local option issue provides that petitions for the election must be signed by at least 30 per cent of the total vote cast at the last preceding election. The vote for governor in Washtenaw county in 1914 was 9,355, making necessary 2,807 signatures to the local option petition.

Woman Is Found Guilty.

St. Joseph—After a circuit court jury found Carrie May Cutler, of Benton Harbor, guilty of murder in the second degree, James O'Hara, assistant prosecuting attorney, made a plea to the court for clemency. The jury deliberated for eight hours before arriving at a verdict.

Mrs. Cutler, on April 30 last, shot down her husband when he came to the house where she was employed as a domestic to ask her to come back to live with him. The couple had been separated for several weeks. The trial lasted for a week.

CARRANZA WILL BE RECOGNIZED

A-B-C CONFERENCE DECIDES HIS IS DEFACTO GOVERNMENT OF MEXICO.

VILLA TO CONTINUE FIGHT

Action of State Department Will Have the Effect of Stopping Shipments of Arms to Factions.

Washington—Official advices have been received here that the governments of Argentina, Brazil and Chile are in accord with the decision of the United States to grant recognition to the party led by General Carranza as the de facto government in Mexico.

It became known Sunday that some of the South American governments long before Saturday's conference had authorized their diplomatic representatives to favor the recognition of General Carranza in the Pan-American deliberations.

President Wilson has received from Secretary of State Lansing a report of the proceedings of the final conference, but several days ago he indicated to the secretary his acquiescence in the plan proposed.

The form in which recognition is to be accorded has not been decided, but it may be done by formal notification to Eliseo Arrandondo, authorized representative here of the Carranza government.

Extension of recognition is expected soon. This will result in the immediate order of an embargo on arms against factions opposed to the Carranza government, a step which will materially weaken the resources of the Villa element, which intends to continue the fight in Mexico.

Miguel Diaz Lombardo gave out a statement Sunday in behalf of the Villa faction in declaring that while it was a source of satisfaction that the United States has shown its sympathy with the Mexican Constitutional revolution against Huerta by recognizing a revolutionary faction, nevertheless it was intended to demonstrate by further military operations that the Carranza party's supremacy was temporary.

George C. Carrothers, American consular agent, telegrapher the state department the substance of a long interview he had with General Villa at Juarez, in which the latter explained, in line with utterances to the press Saturday night, that he intended to continue fighting Carranza. No mention was made of withdrawing protection to foreigners as reported in press dispatches, but officials realize that the legal responsibility for protection of foreigners rests always with the recognized government for all parts of the country, whether in rebellion or not.

Americans, for this reason, were recently advised to withdraw from northern Mexico, but many have failed to heed the state department's advice. The Washington government during the Taft administration took the position, however, that even when a recognized government existed in Mexico City, the leaders of rebellious factions personally were responsible for the acts of their followers and gave warning to that effect. This precedent probably will be followed in the event of difficulties now in northern Mexico.

OFFICERS FOR YEAR CHOSEN

Liberal Churches Close State Meeting at Lansing With Election.

Lansing—Universalists and Unitarians of the state named officers and considered meeting places for next year at the closing sessions of their joint convention here Wednesday.

A test of the recently enacted Sours law, which gives township boards power to refuse saloon licenses, is involved in a writ of mandamus granted by the Michigan supreme court to Attorney Fred C. Toupie, representing Raymond A. Price of Harvard township, Kent county.

DECLARES HIS PARTY WILL CONTINUE THE STRUGGLE

M. DIAZ LOMBARDO.

Washington—Following the report that the Carranza government would be recognized by the United States, Lombardo, who is the representative of the Villa faction, announced that the struggle in Mexico would be continued. The embargo on arms to his party which will follow the recognition of Carranza will, however, materially weaken Villa's forces.

FIGURES IN STATE CROPS

Secretary of State in Report Comes Near to Giving Final Yield of Wheat in Michigan.

Lansing—While the final estimated total yield of wheat this year in Michigan will not be made public until November, the report to the secretary of state for September, made public Thursday morning, comes pretty close to what will be the final figures.

The average yield for the entire state is 20.18 bushels to the acre. The average for the southern counties is 21.17; the central counties, 21.16; the northern counties, 16.22, and the upper peninsula counties, 21.53.

During August and September, it is estimated that 1,750,000 bushels of wheat were marketed. No indication as to the condition of the wheat is given.

Estimates of the average yield of other products follow: Barley, 28.12 bushels; oats, 39.72 bushels; corn, 27.77 bushels; potatoes, 67.56 bushels; beans, 9.44 bushels, and sugar beets, 9.88 tons.

Regarding the damage to the crops the report says:

"The estimated yield of beans, corn and potatoes is 26.15 and 22 per cent respectively below the ten years' average from 1905 to 1914 inclusive.

"Seventy-three per cent of our crop correspondents in the southern counties complain of severe damage to corn, beans, potatoes and sugar beets by cold weather, excessive moisture and blight; 80 per cent of correspondents in the central and northern counties and upper peninsula report corn, beans and potatoes badly injured by rain and frost."

STATE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Petitions are being circulated for the submission to a vote of the proposition of a commission form of government for Charlotte. The petitions will be submitted to the council in the near future.

The thirteenth annual state boys' conference under the auspices of the Michigan Y. M. C. A. will be held in Kalamazoo Nov. 26, 27 and 28. This conference is only for the older boys, those over 15.

Ewen C. Nichols, formerly of the staff of a Port Huron newspaper, has enlisted with the Canadian contingent and started for the front. His wife, a Port Huron girl, will remain with relatives here while Nichols is on the firing line.

The laying of the corner stone of the new $200,000 Woman's Benefit association building at Port Huron will be under the auspices of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Michigan, October 22. George L. Lusk of Detroit will preside at the ceremonies.

Guy Gaukeller, 30, a Bueman employed by the Michigan State Telephone company, was electrocuted Monday morning at Saginaw while at work on a pole carrying electric wires with a voltage of 2,300. He seized two of the electric wires and received the full current.

R. J. Baldwin, superintendent of M. A. C. state extension work, is preparing to institute an educational campaign to prevent spread of hog cholera. Chief center of the disease is now Lenawee county.

Eleven persons lost their lives and 15 were burned or injured by fire and explosions during September, according to the monthly report of State Fire Marshal Winship. Five deaths were caused by careless handling of gasoline and kerosene, three by dynamite and one, a child of four, was burned to death playing with matches.

SWEDEN.

If Sweden and England come to a satisfactory understanding regarding Swedish imports and the transit of supplies to Germany, this understanding will not be reached through any Swedish concession or alteration of her demands to be treated as a neutral nation enjoying the freedom of the seas, according to a statement made by Eric de Trolle, president of the royal trade commission, former minister of foreign affairs, and at present member of the English-Swedish commission engaged in attempting to settle the trade dispute.

"Sweden cannot and will not surrender to English demands restricting her commerce," said de Trolle, "in order to help England in her industrial war against Germany. If she did this, not only would Sweden suffer industrially herself, but she would become virtually an ally of England. The last consideration is the more important, since Sweden would no longer be a strictly neutral nation. It she permits the transit of supplies between England and Russia and joins in any attempt to prevent the transit of supplies to Germany, she is becoming an important base of supplies for the allies and is at the same time really entering into war against Germany. Sweden's modest desire is to be allowed to carry on her normal industry and to observe a strict neutrality—which means helping neither side in a military or industrial way, to the exclusion of the other. In this point of view she differs with the United States which is supplying England alone. Sweden does not consider that a real neutrality. Her position, from which she will not recede is an absolute neutral attitude toward all combatants. It is logical, therefore, that we should hold up supplies destined for Russia while England's stoppage of our imports of raw materials interferes with our industry and trade with Germany. We are sorry that Russia is forced to wait for her supplies, which have accumulated here, but while our ships are being held in English prize courts, we think the action entirely justifiable. There is no quarrel about the export to Germany of our own home manufactures or of the articles which are not placed on the Swedish prohibitory list—although England may think that the export is excessive. The chief obstacle is the question of the exceptions which we are bound to make, to our prohibitory export list."

There is an abundance of edible mushrooms in southern Sweden this year. But the people know so little about this kind of food that they hardly ever dare to pick anything except the most common species, the cantarelle. The city physician of Gothenburg has proposed that a mushroom bureau be established in that city in order that those who wish to sell mushrooms may have their goods inspected by an expert before they are offered for sale on the market.

A semi-official statement has been issued denying the report that Swedish ships are being sold abroad for the purpose of raising cash preparatory to Sweden's participation in the war. It is declared that no such sales are known to have been presented.

The temperance people's sick and funeral aid fund, which is managed at an office in Karlskrona and is the largest fund of its kind in Sweden, will receive a subsidy of $42,000 from the national government this year.

So many men are out of work in Blekinge lan that it is proposed to appropriate tens of thousands of dollars for public works in order that they may get a chance to make a living.

The city council and the harbor directors of Halmstad have offered a free site for two grain elevators which the national food commission is expected to build at this place.

The Swedish manufacturers of chinaware have raised the prices of their products ten per cent.

Lower flour prices are expected as soon as the mills have commenced to grind the crop of this year.

The Swedish government has prohibited the export of rubber, printers' ink and dyes.

The city council of Gothenburg has resolved to borrow an amount not to exceed $270,000 for buying stock in the Sweden-North America steamship company.

About 1,000 sick benefit societies have been officially registered in Sweden. Their aggregate membership exceeds 500,000.

The city council of Halmstad has voted $5,000 for the purchase of wood and coal, which are to be sold to poor people at cost next winter.

Mr. F. Boiling of Goffa is the proud possessor of a genuine Stradivarius violin. His father happened to pick it up while taking the waters at Karlskrona in 1855. Thousands of dollars have been offered for the instrument, but so far it has remained in the family as a sacred relic.

Stockholm newspapers deny that Sweden has recently been selling a large number of ships to America. They also deny that Swedish banks have participated in the last German war loan.

DENMARK.

King Christian of Denmark celebrated his forty-fifth birthday September 26. The duty of congratulating his majesty fell to the American minister, Dr. Maurice F. Egan, an acting dean of the diplomatic body and the representative of a neutral power. It would have been impossible for the king to receive a minister as representing a mixed diplomatic corps.

Cases of the mouth-and-hoof disease have been detected among the wild boars in an inclosure at Ravnhoft. It is supposed that none of the one hundred animals are free from the disease, and for that reason they have been carefully isolated so as to prevent them from spreading the disease.

About one hundred property owners at Skjorring agreed to buy the Skjorring mill and tear it down in order to regulate the level of the water in the river. The owner of the mill agreed to take about $3,000 for his property. This project has been talked about for 50 years past.

Complaints come from all parts of Jylland that the foxes are multiplying at an alarming rate. This is not so strange, for the growing plantations afford them fine shelters and protection. There are plenty of mice in these plantations. But Mr. Reynard thinks it is more high-toned sport to help himself to the chickens of the farmers. Thus it comes to pass that the foxes are becoming a great nuisance. The farmers may soon be bound to hunt the foxes systematically.

NORWAY.

Something very close to a panic is spreading over both Norway and Sweden as a result of the alarming scarcity of provisions and the unprecedented prices which are demanded for the simplest kind of food. Norway is now on the point of following Sweden's lead in prohibiting the export of all provisions of which there is a present shortage in order that prices may be brought down within reach of the poorer classes. The advance in prices in Norway is approximately the same as in Sweden, but in some cases it has been even more marked.

Herrings, which are one of the main articles of diet among the peasant population, have risen from two cents to four and one-half and five cents apiece, and the present price of oatmeal is 250 per cent higher than it was before the war. The meat shortage was temporarily relieved some time ago, as it was in Sweden, by the slaughter of a large number of cattle which there was not enough grain to feed, but prices have now advanced again, reaching the highest level ever known in Norway. It is a curious paradox, however, that as a nation Norway's economic and financial condition is better than before the war.

Norway's tremendous exports, at the same time that they have drained the country of its necessary provisions for home consumption and carried masses of the people to the verge of starvation, have brought a tremendous amount of money into the country, enabled the country to pay for all its imports and left a large surplus to be used for industrial purposes and public loan. The Bank of Norway—the government's bank—had a year ago $20,000,000 of gold in its vaults. Today it has $40,000,000. A year ago it had issued paper money to the extent of $5,250,000 beyond its deposits, while today with the same amount of paper currency in circulation, it has a reserve of $2,000,000. Deposits in private banks are at present $30,000,000 greater than a year ago on the same date. These banks had to their credit in foreign banks $700,000 last year. This year they have $1,000,000. The war has thus brought Norway a flood tide of prosperity, and if government action is taken to reduce present prices and provide the poorer people with food Norway will have little to lose and a great deal to gain from a long war.

Norway's friendship for England and the fact that she has had less to complain of in the restriction of imports than Sweden have made her trade question a much less serious one than in her sister country. Her chief grievance against England remains the English censorship of her mail and cablegrams to America and other neutral countries. Norway is still trying to devise a more direct and speedier communication with America.

The supreme court of England has ruled that the Norwegians have no right to use the French name "sardines" for the fish that they can in Norway. The Norwegians at once agreed to use the Norwegian word, "Brisling," which has the advantage of being very simple and easy to pronounce by people using different languages. The Norwegians realize that their own name will do just as well. They even have a reason to believe that branding will have a good market in France after the war. The legal fight for the French word cost the Norwegians a heap of money.

A touching sight was witnessed at the Christiania Eastern station the other day. It was the arrival of 14 ladies of different ages, but all dressed in the deepest mourning. They were Norwegians and Germans who had been to Germany to place wreaths on the graves of their fallen husbands and sons. The German authorities had assisted them in many ways, and finally had made arrangements for giving them a chance to return in company to Norway. Even those who did not know the ladies were deeply moved at the sight.

Norwegian seamen tell that they see so many submarines, Zeppelins, aeroplanes and torpedo chasers that they get quite used to the sight. Dead bodies are not so common. But the crew of a ship counted about thirty dead bodies in the course of half an hour while passing through the English channel. Many of them were mutilated.

The commune board of Roken has resolved to buy 400 tons of coal to be sold again to the inhabitants of the community.

LESS MEAT IF BACK AND KIDNEYS HURT

Take a glass of Salts to flush Kidneys if Bladder bothers you—Drink lots of water.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then be all right. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

SAGE AND SULPHUR DARKENS GRAY HAIR

Brush this through faded, lifeless locks and they become dark, glossy, youthful.

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it falls out, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmothers made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

Poor Grandpa. "Pa, did you ever run away when you were a boy?" "No, never." "Did you always go to Sunday school?" "I never missed a Sunday." "Did you ever do what your parents told you not to do?" "I am glad to say that I never did." "Didn't you ever make a fuss when you had to take a bath?" "I should say not. I always took my bath without complaining. I liked it." "Didn't it ever make you mad to be called in to do something for your mother when you would rather stay out and play with the other boys?" "It always gave me the keenest pleasure to do things for my mother, no matter whether I had to stop playing or not." "And did you always speak respectfully of your parents?" "Always. That was one of the first things I ever learned to do." "Gee, what a liar grandpa is."

After the introduction to Johnson his hand had gone mechanically to his coat pocket. The demon at his ear was whispering "kill! kill!" and his fingers sought and found the weapon. While he was listening with the outward ear to Bainbridge's cheerful reminiscences, the little minutiae were arranging themselves; he saw where Broffin would step, and was careful to mark that none of the bystanders would be in range. He would wait until there could be no possibility of missing; then he would fire—from the pocket.

It was Johnson who broke the spell. While Bainbridge was insisting that Griswold should come in and make a social third at the hotel dinner table, the teller picked up his hand-bag and mounted the steps. Griswold's brain fell into halves. With one of them he was making excuses to the newspaper man; with the other he saw Broffin stop Johnson and draw him aside.

What the detective was saying was only too plainly evident. Johnson wheeled short to face the sidewalk group, and Griswold could feel in every fiber of him the searching scrutiny to which he was being subjected. When he stole a glance at the pair on the porch, Johnson was shaking his head slowly, and he did it again after a second thoughtful stare. Griswold, missing completely now what Bainbridge was saying, overheard the teller's low-toned rejoinder to the detective's urgings: "It's no use, Mr. Broffin; I'd have to swear positively to it, you know, and I couldn't do that."

No, I don't want to hear your corroborative evidence; it might make me see a resemblance where there is none. Wait until Mr. Galbraith recovers; he's your man." Griswold hardly knew how he made shift to get away from Bainbridge finally; but when it was done, and he was crossing the little triangular park which filled the angle between the business squares and the lake-fronting residence streets, he was sweating profusely, and the departing fear-mania was leaving him weak and tremulous.

Passing the stone-barked fountain in the middle of the park he stopped, jerked the pistol from his pocket, spilled the cartridges from its magazine, and stooped to grope for a loose stone in the walk-border. With the fountain base for an anvil and the loosened border stone for a hammer he beat the weapon into shapeless inutilty and flung it away.

"God knows whom I shall be tempted to kill, next!" he groaned; and the trembling fit was still unweaving him when he went on to keep the appointment made by Charlotte Farnham.

CHAPTER XXIX.

Dust and Ashes.

A full moon, blood-red from the smoke of forest fires far to the eastward, was rising over the Wahaska hills when Griswold unlocked the gate of the Farnham inclosure and passed quickly up the walk.

Since the summoning note had stressed the urgencies, he was not surprised to find the writer of it awaiting his coming on the vine-shadowed porch. In his welcoming there was a curious mingling of constraint and impatience, and he was moved to marvel. Miss Farnham's outlook upon life, the point of view of the ideally well-balanced, was uniformly poised and self-contained, and he was wondering if some fresh entanglement were threatening when she motioned him to a seat and placed her own chair so that the light from the sitting-room windows would leave her in the shadow.

"You had my note?" she began.

"Yes. It came while I was away from the hotel, and the regular trip of the inn brake was the first conveyance I could catch. Am I late?"

Her reply was qualified. "That remains to be seen."

There was a hesitant pause, and then she went on: "Do you know why I sent for you to come?"

"No, not definitely."

"It was hoping you would know; it would make it easier for me. You owe me something, Mr. Griswold."

"I owe you a great deal," he admitted, warmly. "It is hardly putting it too strong to say that you have made some part of my work possible which would otherwise have been impossible."

"I didn't mean that," she dissented, with a touch of cool scorn. "I have no especial ambition to figure as a character, however admirable, in a book. Your obligation doesn't lie in the literary field; it is real—and personal. You have done me a great injustice, and it seems to have been carefully premeditated."

The blow was so sudden and so calmly driven home that Griswold gasped.

"An injustice—to you?" he protested; but she would not let him go on.

"Yes. At first, I thought it was only a coincidence—your coming to Wahaska—but now I know better. You came here, in goodness knows what spirit of reckless bravado, because it was my home; and you made the decision apparently without any consideration for me; without any thought of the embarrassments and difficulties in which it might involve me."

Truly, the heavens had fallen and the solid earth was reeling! Griswold lay back in the deep lounging chair and fought manfully to retain some little hold upon the anchorings. Could this be his ideal; the woman whom he had set so high above all others in the scale of heroic faultlessness and sublime devotion to principle? And she was so much a slave of the conventional as to be able to tell him coldly that she had recognized him again, and that her chief concern was the embarrassment it was causing her? Before he could gather the words for any adequate rejoinder, she was going on pointedly:

"You have done everything you could to make the involvement complete. You have made friends of my friends, and you came here as a friend of my father. You have drawn Edward Raymer into the entanglement and helped him with the stolen money. In every way you have sought to make it more and more impossible for me to give information against you—and you have succeeded. I can't do it now, without facing a scandal that would never die in a small place like this, and without bringing trouble and ruin upon a family of our nearest friends. And that is why I sent for you today; and why I say you owe me something."

Griswold was sitting up again, and he had recovered some small measure of self-possession.

"I certainly owe you many apologies, at least," he said, ironically. "I have really been doing you a great injustice, Miss Farnham—a very grave injustice, though not exactly of the kind you mention. I think I have been misapprehending you from the beginning. How long have you known me as the man who is wanted in New Orleans?"

"A long time; though I tried not to believe it at first. It seemed incredible that the man I had spoken to on the Belle Julie would come here and put me in such a false position."

"Good heavens!" he broke out; "is your position all you have been thinking of? Is that the only reason why you haven't set the dogs on me?"

"It is the chief reason why I couldn't afford to do anything more than I have done. Goodness knows, I have tried in every way to warn you, even to pointing out the man who is shadowing you. To do it, I have had to deceive my father. I have been hoping that you would understand and go away."

"Wait a minute," he commanded. "Let me get it straight! You still believe that the thing I did was a criminal thing?"

"We needn't go into that part of it again," she returned, with a sort of placid impatience. "Once I thought that there might be some way in which you had justified yourself to yourself, but now—"

"That isn't the point," he interrupted roughly. "What I want to know is this: Do you still believe it is a crime?"

"Of course, it is a crime; I know it, you know it, all the world knows it."

Again he sat back and took time to gather up a few of the scattered shards and fragments. When he spoke it was to say: "I think the debt is on the other side, Miss Charlotte; I think you owe me something. You probably won't understand when I say that you have robbed me of a very precious thing—my faith in the ultimate goodness of a good woman. You believe—"

"You have always believed—that I am a criminal; and yet you have been weak enough to let expediency seal your lips. I am truer to my code than you are to yours, as you shall see if the day ever comes when I shall be convinced that I did wrong. But that is neither here nor there. You sent for me; what is it that you want me to do?"

"I want to give you one more chance to disappoint the Wahaska gossip," she replied, mildly unmoved, as it seemed, by his harsh arraignment. "Do you know why this man Broffin is still waiting?"

"I can guess. He is taking a long chance on the chapter of accidents."

"Not altogether. Three days ago, Mr. Galbraith had Miss Grierson telegraph to New Orleans for some one of the bank officials. Yesterday I learned that the man who is coming is the teller who waited on me and who gave you the money. As soon as I heard that, I began to tell her that."

Griswold did not tell her that the danger she feared was a danger past. "Go on," he prompted.

"You are no longer safe in Wahaska," she asserted. "The teller can identify you, and the detective will give him the opportunity. That is doubtless what he is waiting for."

"And you would suggest that I make a run for it? Is that why you sent for me?"

"It is. You are tempting fate by staying; and, notwithstanding what you have said, I still insist that you owe me something. There is a fast train west at ten o'clock. If you need ready money—"

Griswold laughed. It had gone beyond the tragic and was fast lapsing into comedy, farce.

"We are each of us appearing in a new role tonight, Miss Farnham," he said, with sardonic humor; "I as the hunted criminal, and you as the equally culpable accessory after the fact. If I run away, what shall be done with the 'swag,' the bulk of which, as you know, is tied up in Raymer's business?"

"I have thought of that," she returned calmly, "and that is another reason why you shouldn't let them take you. Right or wrong, you have incurred a fresh responsibility in your dealings with Mr. Raymer; and Edward, who is perfectly innocent, must be protected in some way."

It was not in human nature to resist the temptation to strike back.

"I have told Raymer how he can most successfully underwrite his financial risk," he said, with malice intentional.

"How?"

"By marrying Miss Grierson."

He had touched the springs of anger at last.

"That woman!" she broke out. And then: "If you have said that to Edward Raymer, I shall never forgive you as long as I live! It is your affair to secure Edward against loss in the money matter—your own individual responsibility, Mr. Griswold. He accepted the money in good faith, and—"

Again Griswold gave place to the caustic humor and finished for her.

"—And, though it is stolen money, it must not be taken away from him. Once, when I was even more foolish than I am now, I said of you that you would be a fitting heroine in a story in which the hero should be a man who might need to borrow a conscience. It's quite the other way around."

"We needn't quarrel," she said, retreating again behind the barrier of cold reserve. "I suppose I have given you the right to say disagreeable things to me, if you choose to assert it. But we are wasting time which may be very precious. Will you go away, as I have suggested?"

He found his hat and got upon his feet rather unsteadily.

"I don't know; possibly I shall. But in any event, you needn't borrow any more trouble, either on your own account or on Raymer's. By the merest chance, I met Johnson, the teller you speak of, a few minutes ago at the Winnebago house and was introduced to him. He didn't know me, then, or later, when Broffin was telling him that he ought to know me. Hence, the matter rests as it did before—between you and Mr. Galbraith."

"Mr. Galbraith?"

"Yes. That was a danger past, too, a short time ago. I met him, socially, and he didn't recognize me. Afterward, Broffin pointed me out to him, and again he failed to identify me. But the other day, after I had pulled him out of the lake, he remembered. I've been waiting to see what he will do."

"He will do nothing. You saved his life."

Griswold shook his head.

"I am still man enough to hope that he won't let the bit of personal service make him compound a felony."

"Why do you call it that?" she demanded.

"Because, from his point of view, and yours, that is precisely what it is; and it is what you are doing, Miss Farnham. I, the criminal, say this to you. You should have given me up the moment you recognized me. That is your creed, and you should have lived up to it. Since you haven't, you have wronged yourself and have made me the poorer by a thing that—"

"Stop!" she cried, standing up to face him. "Do you mean to tell me that you are ungrateful enough to—"

"No; ingratitude isn't quite the word. I'm just sorry; with the sorrow you have when you look for something that you have a right to expect, and find that it isn't there; that it has never been there; that it isn't anywhere. You have hurt me, and you have hurt yourself; but there is still a chance for you. When I am gone, go to the telephone and call Broffin at the Winnebago house. You can tell him that he will find me at my rooms. Good-by."

He was half way to the foot of Lakeview avenue, striding along moodily with his head down and his hands behind him, when he collided violently with Raymer going in the opposite direction. The shock was so unexpected that Griswold would have been knocked down if the muscular young man had not caught him as he came promptly. At the saving instant came mutual recognition.

"Hello, there!" said Raymer. "You are the very man I've been looking for. Charlotte wants to see you."

"Not now she doesn't," was the rather grim contradiction. "I have just left."

"Oh."

There was a pause, and then Griswold cut in morosely.

"So you did take my way out of the labor trouble, after all, didn't you?"

Raymer looked away.

"I don't know just how you'd like to have me answer that, Kenneth. How much or how little do you know of what happened?"

"Nothing at all"—shortly.

"Well, it was Margery who wrought the miracle, of course. I don't know, yet, just how she did it; but it was done, and done right."

"And you have asked her to marry you?"

"Suffering Scott! how you do come at a man! Yes, I asked her, if you've got to know."

"Well!" snapped Griswold. "She—she turned me down, Kenneth; got up and walked all over me! That's a horrible thing to make me say, but it's the truth."

"I don't understand it, Raymer. Was it the No that means No?"

"I don't understand it, either," returned the iron founder, with grave naivete. "And, yes, I guess she meant it. But that reminds me. She knew I was looking for you and she gave me a note—let me see, I've got it here somewhere; oh, yes, here it is—gilt monogram and all."

Griswold took the note and pocketed it without comment and without looking at it.

"Were you going to Doctor Bertie's?" he asked.

"I was. Have you any objection?"

"Not the least in the world. It's a good place to go to just now, and I guess you are the right man for the place. Good-night."

At the next corner where there was an electric light, Griswold stopped and opened the monogrammed envelope. The enclosure was a single sheet of perfumed note paper upon which, without date, address or signature was written the line:

"Mr. Galbraith is better—and he is grateful."

CHAPTER XXX.

Apples of Isthakhar.

The swinging arc light suspended above the street crossing sputtered and died down to a dull red dot of incandescence as Griswold returned Margery's note to his pocket and walked on.

There are crises in which the chief contention looms so large as to leave no room for the ordinary mental processes. Griswold saw no significance in the broken line of Margery's message. The one tremendous revelation——the knowledge that the dress-revelation course had finally fallen upon the woman whose convictions should have saved her—was blotting out all the subtler perceptive faculties; and for the time the struggle with the submerging wave of disappointment and disheartenment was bitter.

There was two squares beyond the crossing of the broken-circuit arc light, and was still following the curve of the lakeside boulevard, when he came to the surface of the submerging wave long enough to realize that he had entered Jasper Grierson's portion of the water-front drive. The great house, dark as to its westward gables save for the lighted upper windows marking the sick room and its ante-chamber, loomed in massive solitude among its sheltering aunts; and the moon, which had now topped the hills and the crimsoning smoke haze, was bathing land and lakescape in a flood of silver light, whitening the pale yellow sands of the beach and etching fantastic leaf-traceries on the gravel of the boulevard driveway.

There was no inclosing fence on the Meride border of the boulevard, and under the nearest of the lawn oaks there were rustic park seats, Jasper Grierson's single concession to the public when he had fought for and secured his property right-of-way through the lake's margin. Griswold turned aside and sat down on one of the benches. The disappointment was growing less keen. He was beginning to understand that he had made no allowance for the eternal feminine in the idealized Fidella for the feminine and the straitly human. But the disheartenment remained. Should he stay and fight it out? Or should he take pity upon the poor prisoner of the conventions and seek to postpone the day of reckoning by flight?

He had not fitted the answer to either of these sharp-pointed queries when a pair of light-fingered hands came from behind to clap themselves upon his eyes, and a well-known voice said, "Guess."

"Margery!" he said, and she laughed with the joyous unconstraint of a happy child and came around to sit by him.

"I was doing time out on the veranda, and I saw you down here in the moonlight, looking as if you had lost something," she explained, adding: "Have you?"

"I don't know; can you lose that which you've never had?" he returned musingly. And then: "Yes; perhaps I did lose something. Don't ask me what it is. I hardly know, myself."

After they have been sobered up and are able to go to work again, the temporary guests are invited to enroll as members, take part in the weekly business meetings and pay such weekly dues as they can afford for the maintenance of the club and its rescue work. The dues vary according to each member's income, from five cents to $1 a week. Extra assessments for the benefit of club members in distress are also collected in varying voluntary contributions.

Certainly Some Voice.

Here is a little story that was told by Congressman John E. Bakwer of California the other night, when the talk topic in the lobby of a hotel took a musical turn:

Some time ago the guests at a reception were discussing the relative merits of several songsters, when one of the party turned to a man named Brown.

"By the way, Brown," said he, "you are something of a singer, are you not?"

"Not on your life!" was the emphatic response of Brown. "I never sang a note that somebody didn't threaten to send in a riot call. You are thinking of my brother."

"Perhaps I am," was the thoughtful rejoinder of the other. "Has he a heavy bass voice?"

"Yes," smiled Brown; "so heavy that it makes him staggered to carry it."—Philadelphia Telegram.

During courtship an ounce of natery is equal to a pound of earnestness.

"You have just come from Doctor Bertie's?" she inquired.

"Yes."

"And Charlotte doesn't want to marry you?"

"Heavens and earth!" he exploded. "Who put the idea into your head that I wanted to marry her?"

"You did"—calmly.

"Then, for pity's sake, let me take it out, quick. If I were the last man on earth, Miss Farnham wouldn't marry me; and if she were the last woman, I think I'd go down myself in the lake!"

The young woman of the many metamorphoses was laughing again, and this time the laugh was a letter-perfect imitation of a schoolgirl giggle.

"My!" she said. "How dreadfully hard she must have been on you!"

"Please don't laugh," he pleaded; "unless you are the heartless kind of person who would laugh at a funeral, I'm down under the hoofs of the horses, at last, Margery, girl. Before you and laugh in his face. Are you glad or sorry?"

His answer was the answer of the man who was, for the time being, neither the moralist nor the criminal. With a swift outreaching he drew her to him, crushed her in his arms, covered her face with kisses.

"I am glad—glad that I am your lover," he whispered, passionately. "God, girl! but you are a woman to die for! No, not yet"—when she would have slipped out of his arms—believe me, Margery; there has never been anyone else—not for a moment. But I thought it was Raymer, and for your sake and his I could have stepped aside. That is the one decent thing I have done in all this devilish business. Are you listening?"

She had stopped struggling, and was hiding her face on his shoulder. He felt her quick little nod and went on: "Since you know the one decent thing, you must know all the horrible things, too. A dozen times I have been a murderer in a heart."

She looked up quickly.

"No, boy, I'll never believe that—never!"

"Wait," he said. "It was there this evening—just a little while ago. Miss Farnham and Galbraith were not the only ones I had to fear; there was another; the teller who got here from New Orleans on the seven-forty-five train. You didn't know about him, did you? He came, and an old newspaper friend of mine was with him. I stumbled upon them on the sidewalk in front of the Winnebago house; and Broffin was there, too. We were introduced, the teller and I, and Broffin was so sure he had me that he got his handcuffs out and was opening them."

Margery shuddered and hid her face again. "And I—I didn't know!" she gasped.

"Luck was with me again," he continued. "Johnson didn't remember me; refused to do so even when Broffin stopped him and tried to tell him who I was. I had a pistol in my pocket, and it was aimed at Broffin. If he had made a move to take me, I should certainly have killed him."

She sat up suddenly.

"Give me that pistol, Kenneth—give it to me now!"

"I can't," he confessed, shamefacedly. "When it was all over, I smashed the pistol with a stone and threw it away."

She drew a long breath. "Is that all?" she asked.

"All but one thing; the worst of them all—that day in the bank vault—"

The daughter of men buried her face on his shoulder again at that. "Don't!" she begged. "You couldn't help it, boy; I made you do it—meaning to. There! and I said that wild horses should never drag it out of me!"

Again he said, "Wait," and covered the shining head on his shoulder with a caressing hand. "It wasn't love, then, little girl; that's what it breaks my heart to tell you—it was just madness. And it wasn't clean; you've got to know that, too."

She nodded her head violently. "I know," she murmured; "I knew it at the time, and that was what made me cry. But now it's different. Isn't it, boy? now you are—"

"You have heard it all, Margery. You know what I thought I was, and what I have turned out to be. I'm afraid I am just a common crook, after all; there doesn't seem to be a standing room anywhere else for me. But every living fiber of me, the good and the bad, loves you—loves you!"

"What do I care for anything else?" she flashed back. "You are you, Kenneth; that is all I know, and all I care for. If you had stolen all the money in the world, and had killed a dozen men to make your get-away, it would be just the same. Only—"

"Only what?" he demanded, jealously. "It would be just the same to me; but—"

"Oh, boy, dear! It will never, never be the same to you!"

"I don't understand," he stammered.

"Some day you will. You call yourself a crook—man, man! there isn't a crooked drop of blood in you! Don't I know? You persuaded yourself that you had a right to take this money; perhaps you did have; I don't say you didn't. When I see anything I want, I reach out and take it. If I can—and I guess most people will, if they dared. But you are different; you are good. Some day all these dreadful things that have come tagging along after the fact will rise up and gnash their teeth at you and tell you that it was a sin, a crime. And then—oh, boy, dear! then I shall lose you!"

Very gently he took her in his arms again; and for a time all things sensible and tangible, the deserted driveway, and the plashing of the little waves on the sands, the staring moonlight and the stenciled shadows of the oaks, were forgotten in the great soul-healing silence that wrapped them about and enveloped them.

Surely Prize Scarecrow.

An American tourist had been boasting again in the village inn, says London Tit-Bits.

"Talking of scarecrows," he said, with a drawl, "why, my father once put one up, and it frightened the crows so much that not one entered the field again for a year."

He looked triumphantly around his audience. Surely that had settled those country bumpkins.

But he was to meet his match. "That's nothing," retorted one farmer. "A neighbor of mine once put a scarecrow into his potato patch and it terrified the birds so much that one rascal of a crow who had stolen some potatoes came next day and put them back."

"Not on your life!" was the emphatic response of Brown. "I never sang a note that somebody didn't threaten to send in a riot call. You are thinking of my brother."

"Perhaps I am," was the thoughtful rejoinder of the other. "Has he a heavy bass voice?"

"Yes," smiled Brown; "so heavy that it makes him staggered to carry it."—Philadelphia Telegram.

Strengthened With Might

By REV. WM. WALLACE KETCHUM
Director of the Practical Work Course, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago

TEXT—That he would grant you, according to the riches of his glory, to be strengthened with might by his spirit in the inner man.—Ephesians 3:16.

This is one of four petitions which constitute Paul's prayer for the Ephesian Christians. It teaches us for one thing that God intends his people to be people of power. One speaking of this prayer says: "Paul's prayer is God's purpose." By this he means that what Paul prays we may have and may be, God intends we shall have and shall be.

Before every Christian God places potentialities of power. That is, every Christian may have this power if he desires it and makes it possible for God to give it to him. For God never purposes for us to have anything, that he does not make it possible for us to possess it. To do otherwise would be to tease and tantalize us, and God never does that. When he exhorts us to "be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might," it makes it possible for us, if we make it possible for him, to be strengthened with might by his spirit in the inner man.

The expression "inner man" undoubtedly means the soul—the inner self—as distinguished from the visible material body which it animates. Peter calls the inner man, "the hidden man of the heart" (I Peter 3:4). And Paul in another place speaks of it as "the inward man," contrasting it with "the outward man," which, he says, perishes daily (II Cor. 4:16).

It is very evident from this that the strength which may be ours is not physical power, nor even mental power which may strive to attain, but inner spiritual strength. It is strength of Christian character and nobility of soul.

The one possessing this inner strength is fortified against temptation. It was this strength that enabled Joseph to maintain the integrity of his character in the face of the temptation of Potiphar's wife and prompted him to reply to her evil suggestion: "How then, can I do this great wickedness and sin against God?"

It is the strength, which when possessed, makes one mighty in holy service. Paul without it, would never have been the mighty apostle; and without it Peter would have remained the vacillating cowardly disciple. Without it there would have been no Martin Luther, no John Knox, no Charles Wesley, no William Carey, no Charles Spurgeon, no Dwight L. Moody. These men were what they were, and did what they did, because they were strengthened with might by his spirit in the inner man.

Again, this petition teaches us that God is the one who imparts this inner strength through his holy spirit. The petition is, "that he would grant us to be strengthened with might by his spirit." So while in another place we are exhorted to "be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might," we learn here that the strength by which we are to be made strong comes from God. He is the one who empowers us. Yet, if we are to be strengthened by God, we must place ourselves before God in such a way that he can give to us the strength of the Lord. We of ourselves are impotent, but God has made every provision for impotent people to be people of power. He is able and waits only our willingness for him to impart unto us his strength.

The laws that govern the imparting of us to his strength are the laws that govern the reception into our lives of the holy spirit in power. It is the holy spirit who is spoken of in the word as "the spirit of might." He it is, then, who must have his place of power in us if we are to be strengthened with might in the inner man. The early church was commanded to tarry in Jerusalem for the power necessary for service, and on the day of Pentecost while they tarried the power came, when the holy spirit descended upon them. Ever since that day "the spirit of might" has been in the earth ready to take his place of power in every believer's life.

Ready and willing is he to empower the people of God, but ready and willing only as we recognize him as the power we need to make us strong, ready and willing if we will surrender ourselves to God, and by faith receive the holy spirit to be in us what he desires to be, "the spirit of might." Then there will be fulfilled in our lives the apostle's prayer which, while primarily for the Ephesian Christians, is also for us that we might be strengthened with might in the inner man.

His Loving Will.

Beyond all secondary causes, deeper than disease or accident, lies the loving will of him who is the Lord of life and death. Death is Christ's minister, "mighty and beautiful, though his face be dark," and he, too, stands amidst the ranks of the ministering spirits sent forth to minister to them that shall be heirs of salvation.—Alexander MacLaren.

Major M. J. Phillips, of Owosso and Mr. Pippis, of the Detroit News, are arranging for moving pictures, the photos taken at the Military reservation during the late encampment. All together about 8,000 feet of pictures were taken out of which there are available about 6,000 feet of perfect films. The work of assembling the pictures and necessary captions and inscriptions will take at least two months. No doubt these pictures will be shown in Grayling at some future time.

The United Merchants' Retail association of America, with offices in Detroit, who had advertising contracts with merchants and publishers in about 75 cities in this state, have gone out of business, owing to the fact that the secretary of the association absconding with the funds of the association. The firm had contracts with this newspaper and also with Thomas Cassidy, who was to have acted as their local representative. Mr. Cassidy and O. P. Schumann were called to Detroit first of the week and went before the Postal authorities and gave information relative to the methods of the Association and it appears that indictments will be made charging the officers of that concern with violation of the postal laws.

Trade at Home

We Need Each Other

No man stands by himself. He is only part of his community. "A" buys groceries from "B;" "B" buys underwear from "C;" "C" buys drugs from "A" and so it goes. The United States would be bankrupt if everybody traded with foreign countries. This city would be bankrupt if everybody traded out-of-town.

Don't forget we pay taxes here, employ local help, and keep your money circulating locally where there's a chance for it to come back to you.

Many of our readers will note with pleasure another insertion of Home recipes by local good cooks. These have been of great interest and help to many families into which the Avalanche goes, and we hope to have more installments in our future editions. Contributions to this column are not limited, and everybody is invited to send in some of their favorite, tried, recipes. We hope to hear from our former friends as well as others.

J. C. McCabe, secretary of the Bay City board of commerce was a visitor in Grayling, Thursday and Friday last, a guest of C. T. Clark, of the DuPont Powder company. While here Mr. McCabe visited the new plant of the company, also our new school house and hotel, which buildings are in course of construction. He was invited to visit the Fish hatchery and after spending a half hour at that plant said he "wouldn't have missed it—it's great." Mr. McCabe was greatly impressed with our city and with its development during the past few years. We have grown from a town of 1775 to, what would be a conservative estimate, about 2000, and the prospects for growth are good for several years to come. Even after the lumbering days, we are still going to have a good town. Mr. McCabe was until recently managing editor of the Bay City Tribune, and together with his visit with Mr. Clark seemed to greatly enjoy his trip to this city.

If anyone heard a sousing roar and felt the water raising in the AuSable river last Monday, we want to tell them that it was nothing more than one of our business men falling out of a boat. We will not mention any names only that it was Frank Dreese. Holger Schmidt was in the bunch and as he was pouring a volley from his Howitzer into a flock of two ducks, it kicked one end of the boat around and Dreese was unable to keep his balance and was plunged down, down, down deep into four or five feet of water. He says that the water was just as wet at the bottom as at the surface, and that a man would have to be mighty quick to go to the bottom and back without getting wet. Altho the ducking dampened his clothes it did not dampen the ardor of the hunters so after squeezing the water out of his "all wool except the button holes" they proceeded down the stream. Schmidt was real nice about it and did not laugh more than 90 per cent of the time, but wait! his time was coming and while in the vicinity of the Goodar club house also took a tumble into the water when the boat struck a water-logged timber. Of course his companion did not enjoy the stunt and felt real sorry (?) over the mishap. In spite of accidents it was a great day and one that will long be pleasantly remembered by both men, except that their antics frightened their dog and it "took to the woods and hasn't been seen since."

MICHIGAN'S MANUFACTURING INDUSTRIES

(From "Michigan, the Land of Plenty")

MICHIGAN was the second state in the Union in the manufacture of furniture and refrigerators in 1909, and first in the manufacture of refrigerators alone. Of the 202 establishments included in this classification in 1909, only ten were primarily engaged in the manufacture of refrigerators, the value of the output of these establishments constituting about one-twelfth of the total value of products reported for the industry. The importance of the industry in the state is no doubt due largely to the abundant available supply of pine and hardwood suitable for these purposes. While the supply of such woods in the state has diminished in late years, the quantity of high grade lumber imported has increased largely and the industry in the state has maintained the impetus afforded by its earlier natural advantages and continued to prosper, as indicated by the fact that the average number of wage earners employed increased from 12,833 to 16,610, or 29.4 per cent, and the value of the products from $18,040,000 to $28,642,000 or 58.6 per cent, during the decade. The value of the products of the furniture and refrigerator industry in Michigan equaled nearly 12 per cent of the total value for the industry in the entire United States.

A Few Other Important Manufacturing Industries.

The beet sugar industry of Michigan has had a tremendous growth. The quantity of beets used in the several large beet sugar factories within the state increased from 205,925 tons in 1899 to 816,609 tons in 1909. The total value of granulated sugar products in 1909 was $9,756,587. The total value of all other products, including granulated sugar, molasses, sirup, pulp and other by-products of the industry, was $10,476,876 as against $1,602,266, ten years previous. The last census of the United States shows Michigan in 1909 as ranking third with all other states in the Union in the beet sugar industry. The latest available figures indicate that the state has taken second place.

Printing and Publishing.—This industry includes the printing and publishing of newspapers, periodicals, books, music—bookbinding and making—lithographing and engraving, etc. In the number of establishments, this industry ranks second in the state, having a very decided growth during the last decade, the value of its product increasing $9,142,000, or 111.4 per cent.

Tobacco Manufactures.—This industry covers the manufacture of cigars, cigarettes, chewing and smoking tobacco and snuff. The total value of products produced from this industry in 1909 was $16,179,000, which was a gain of $6,834,000 or approximately 75 per cent for the last decade.

Leather Goods.—The real development of this industry has taken place since 1889, but in 1849 the state reported 61 establishments which employed 233 wage earners and turned out products valued at $402,000. In 1909 there were 24 plants reported, which employed 2,291 wage earners, the value of whose products totaled $15,331,000.

Paper and Wood Pulp.—The development of this industry in Michigan has been due to the more extensive use of wood pulp in the manufacture of paper. In 1889 there were 31 establishments reported for the state, which employed an average of 1,219 wage earners and manufactured products valued at $2,919,000. The growth during the decade from 1899-1909 was particularly noteworthy, as the value of the products increased from $4,218,000 to $12,922,000, a gain of $9,704,000 or 230.1 per cent.

Brass and Bronze Products.—In 1909 this industry in Michigan included 60 establishments of which 45 were primarily engaged in the manufacturing of brass casting and brass goods. The remarkable development of this industry in the state during recent years has been due largely to the increased demand for brass specialties in the manufacturing of automobiles. The total value of products increased from $2,148,000 in 1899 to $13,890,000 in 1909. Michigan ranked third among the states in the Union in this industry as measured by value of products.

Patent Medicines, and Compounds and Druggists' Preparations.—Michigan is second among the states in the Union in this industry as a whole and first in the manufacture of druggists' preparations. In 1909 the value of products was $13,475,000 as compared with $7,284,000 ten years previous.

MAKE COMPANION OF CHILD

Chicago Newspaper Gives Some Advice That It Would Seem Worth While to Heed.

"I can't help thinking what sport it would have been if 'Paw' had been born a little boy so he could play with me."

This is the complaint of a little lad whose father feels that it is time wasted to play with the little man in his home.

Fopplish Crab.

Many of the crab species of shellfish clothe themselves. Some species dress elaborately by taking small pieces of different-colored weeds and sticking them on the shell, so as to look like a stone covered with weed. They spend hours, with the utmost perseverance, in making these pieces adhere, by trying the same pieces over and over again until they succeed. They have a fine sense of symmetry, and always put a red piece on one limb to match the red piece they

Too many of us have this opinion.

We think that the children should sit around quietly when we reach home at night, and that we must not be disturbed unless the fancy takes us to chat with the kiddies.

When revelations of the sort quoted are confessed by a child, the father cannot expect the joyous welcome home that he might receive, if the homecoming were a signal for "some fun."

Fun. That is all there is worth while in the opinion of the youngsters.

They are bound to get fun somewhere.

So be such a good pal of that boy of yours that he won't be compelled to seek his good times with another boy's father—or, worse, with companions of whom you would not approve.

What is dignity if it separates you from your son? Forget it and get acquainted with the children.—Chicago American.

JAKE'S FINAL JOURNEY

LAST DESIRE WAS TO KEEP EYE ON SIGNAL AHEAD.

Life of Usefulness Ended as Every Railroad Worker Would Wish—Duty Ended, Jacob Bolz Passed Away in Peace.

It was the year of the big Chicago fire that Jacob Bolz began railroading. Among the engineers on the Chicago & Northwestern road was an old-timer. And his watchword throughout his years at the throttle was: "Keep your eye on the signal ahead!" So closely did he follow this rule that for many years he was in charge of one of the fast trains between Chicago and Milwaukee.

Then came Jake's final journey. And, at the last, his mind was still on the signals. He wanted to be sure that the headway was clear.

They told about it the other day—Jake's old-time pals on the Northwestern road. They all speak of him as Jake.

It happened recently—Jake's final call for the signals ahead. It was at the Bolz home at 3513 Fulton street. They knew that the old engineer was passing out of this world. The doctor and Mrs. Bolz and other members of the family were at the bedside.

Suddenly Jake sat up in his bed. "How are the lights?" he asked sharply.

Jake was back in his cab. His hand was on the throttle. His engine was skimming over the shiny rails, carrying its human freight behind to safety or death.

"How are the lights?" he asked again.

He was asking it of his fireman. There was an uneasy stir among those at the bedside.

"They're all right," Mrs. Bolz finally spoke up. She had been an engineer's wife long enough to know the import of the question.

"Are you sure they're all right?" came the next question.

"Yes, I'm sure," Mrs. Bolz said, choking back a sob.

"Are they red or green?" persisted the veteran engineer.

"They're green," assured Mrs. Bolz. "How do you know? Who told you they're green?" demanded the old-time railroader.

There was a pause. Then Mrs. Bolz thought of the name of E. H. Wade, assistant superintendent of motive power and machinery of the road.

"Mr. Wade says they're green," Mrs. Bolz said.

The old engineer's eyes showed relief. "Well, if Wade says they're all right, we'll go ahead," he said.

And then he lay back in his bed contentedly and the end came.

Jacob Walters, another Northwestern veteran, pulled in his train from Milwaukee shortly after 10 a. m. that day.

"Those were Jake's last words," Walters said. "He wanted to be sure he had the right of way."—Chicago Evening Post.

RAILROAD SENTINEL

It must have been a tree dweller instinct that prompted the Rock Island railroad to put its watchtowers in the Railroad Watchmen on Stilts.

West bottoms on tall posts. Like a stork, poised on one leg, they stand sentinel over the traffic. The watchman has to climb a ladder to get into them.

Novel Switch Locomotive.

A gasoline-driven switching locomotive that weighs only about one-tenth as much as the smallest steam locomotive ordinarily employed in the same class of work is being successfully used in Germany for handling railroad cars around the yards of small industrial establishments. This locomotive is too light in itself to exert much tractive power, and to give it the required adhesion to the rails it is run under the end of a car and a sector of the locomotive is raised by means of a handwheel so that it takes a considerable part of the weight of the car. The locomotive is driven by an automobile engine and is equipped with a winding sheave for miscellaneous work about the yards.—Popular Mechanics.

Signal Wire Too Tight.

One of the worst railroad accidents on record was caused by a too-tight new wire, which pulled the signal down a little. The driver thought it meant "all clear," with the result that a collision occurred.

New Use for Motorcycle.

A motorcycle street sweeper is a new American machine. It is mounted on a side-car chassis of peculiar design, and in front of the sweeping mechanism is a steel brush that loosens the dirt so that the broom may easily remove it.

RAILROADS GAIN BY SAFETY

Fatalities Have Been Noticeably Fewer Since Proper Precautions Have Been Instituted.

The records of the bureau of railroad news and statistics show that during the last three months of 1914 of the 230,500,000 passengers carried 7,834,000,000 passenger miles, not one lost his life in a collision. There were only 78 fatalities altogether as a result of train accidents, including passengers, employees on and off duty, and "other persons." Fourteen persons out of seventy-eight killed were trespassers. During the entire year of 1914 there were only 41 fatalities to passengers as a result of collisions. The third quarter of the year was a bad one, 36 of the fatalities occurring during that period. But even so, the record is better than for any other year—except 1913—that showed anything like the same mileage. The total of 78 deaths for the last quarter is unequaled.

Taking the whole year, the record shows 483 deaths from accidents affecting all persons, employees as well as passengers. This, too, is the best showing made since 1901, when the law requiring monthly accident reports went into effect. Since 1910 the deaths have been 1,058, 441, 963, 712 and 483. This achievement will be all the more appreciated when it is remembered that in 1902, when the deaths were 881, the railroad mileage was 53,000 miles less than in 1914, when there were only 483 deaths. In the latter year the roads carried 353,000,000 more passengers than in 1902, and 735,000,000 more tons of freight. The increase in the number of passengers carried one mile was 15,500,000,000.

Two factors have operated in bringing about this result—the safety-first crusade and improved equipment. Thus credit is due to both companies and employees. The safety-first campaign should, of course, be continued, since there are many people who do not seem yet to have been touched by it. Even the railroads may fall back into their old ways if there is relaxation of effort. Education ought to continue—since there are always new men coming on—till there is created a habit of mind favorable to safety and caution.—Indianapolis News.

RAIL BRACE

The invention provides a brace which will effectively prevent creeping or spreading of the rails of a track, thus minimizing the danger of derailment of a car or train. It provides a rail brace for accomplishing the above result, which comprises a pair of clamping members, one of which is movable laterally and longitudinally relative to the other, whereby the brace may be detached from the rail.—Scientific American.

In Mountain Tunnels.

Engineers on the trains which are sent across the western mountains with sometimes as many as five or six locomotives to pull them over heavy grades, use respirators in order to keep them from being suffocated while passing through the long tunnels. Some of these bores are several thousand feet in length and require a number of minutes to pass. The men in the cabs of the rear engines are continually in an atmosphere heavily filled with the gases and smoke given out by the locomotives ahead, and were it not for artificial means of getting air it would frequently be impossible for them to stay at their places. The breathing masks which are now being used are funnel-shaped and designed to fit tightly over the eyes, nose and mouth of the wearer. Attached to one of these is a rubber hose which is connected with the compressed-air tank of the locomotive so that all of the oxygen needed is available. The air is usually passed through a sponge and cooled by cracked ice before it is taken into the lungs.

Trains to Scoop Passengers On.

The Pennsylvania railroad has adopted a device to aid belated passengers.

The new arrangement is attached to the steps of cars, and is a continuation of the trap door. It bridges the space between the train and the platform, so that there can be no conceivable reason for any one getting his foot caught in the small opening or of any person slipping through.

The belated passengers seeing the extensible still out, runs, jumps on it, and, as the conductor gives the starting signal, the contrivance gathers him up and folds him neatly into the vestibule.

Use Powdered Coal.

Some of the big railroads have been using powdered coal with very satisfactory results. The coal, finely powdered and dried, is stored in receptacles from which it is blown into the firebox in jets by air pressure, much the same as oil fuel is used. The dry powder is converted into gas almost instantaneously, the temperature of the firebox is not lowered and the objectionable heavy black smoke is obviated. This method is also more economical of fuel than ordinary firing and materially lessens the labor of stoking.

Old Railroad Coach.

The only surviving first and second-class passenger coach of the old Bodmin & Wadebridge railroad has come mysteriously with the night into Waterloo station, London. It stands upon a pedestal, a curio, near the exit from the new building. It was the Pullman of its age in 1830. It is only 14 feet long, has curiously shaped windows and was a palace of ease compared with the third-class tumbrels of 1830 to be seen at Epsom.

It is had luck to be a "has been."

WHY HE PASSED UNNOTICED

Fairy Had Discovered Sure Way of Making Himself Invisible—Any-one Can Try It.

Once upon a time there was a good little girl.

And this good little girl asked her mother if she could go and play in the woods and her mother said yes.

So she went to play in the woods. And she was walking along and talking along, and what do you think she met? A fairy! And she was awfully surprised to meet a fairy, so she said to the fairy:

"Where do you come from?"

And the fairy said:

"This is where I live."

And the little girl said:

"I never heard about any fairies living in these woods."

And the fairy said:

"No, because nobody ever saw me here before. But you are a good little girl, so I let you see me."

And the good little girl said:

"How do you manage to be seen by nobody, even though they walk right past you every day?"

"I lend them money,"—London Answers.

Simply Showing Him.

"James, what are you doing to Willie?" asked the schoolteacher.

"He wanted to know if you take ten from fifteen how many would remain. So I took ten of his marbles to show him and now he wants them back."

"Well, why don't you give them to him, then?"

"Cuz he'd forget how many is left."

Hard to Damage.

"Alpine scenery is very grand."

"Very durable, too. I imagine it will pull through the war all right."—Kansas City Journal.

Keep Young

Just as well be young at seventy as old at fifty.

Sick Women Attention

Is it possible there is a woman in this country who continues to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial after all the evidence that is continually being published, which proves beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved more suffering among women than any other one medicine in the world?

We have published in the newspapers of the United States more genuine testimonial letters than have ever been published in the interest of any other medicine for women—and every year we publish many new testimonials, all genuine and true. Here are three never before published:

From Mrs. S. T. Richmond, Providence, R. I.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—"For the benefit of women who suffer as I have done I wish to state what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I did some heavy lifting and the doctor said it caused a displacement. I have always been weak and overworked after my baby was born and inflammation set in, then nervous prostration, from which I did not recover until I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The Compound is my best friend and when I hear of a woman with troubles like mine I try to induce her to take your medicine."—Mrs. S. T. RICHMOND, 84 Progress Avenue, Providence, R. I.

From Mrs. Maria Irwin, Peru, N.Y.

PERU, N. Y.—"Before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was very irregular and had much pain. I had lost three children, and felt worn out all the time. This splendid medicine helped me as nothing else had done, and I am thankful every day that I took it."—Mrs. MARIA IRWIN, R.F.D. 1, Peru, N.Y.

From Mrs. Jane D. Duncan, W. Quincy, Mass.

SOUTH QUINCY, MASS.—"The doctor said that I had organic trouble and he doctored me for a long time and I did not get any relief. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised and I tried it and found relief before I had finished the first bottle. I continued taking it all through middle life and am now a strong, healthy woman and earn my own living."—Mrs. JANE D. DUNCAN, Forest Avenue, West Quincy, Mass.

WOULD BAR MUTUAL LIFE FROM LOAN

POLICY HOLDER BRINGS SUIT FOR INJUNCTION IN CHICAGO.

WOULD PRODUCE ILL WILL

It is Alleged That Antagonisms Will Result Which Would Threaten Life of the Company.

Chicago—Alleging that the Mutual Life Insurance company, of New York, contemplates investing $10,000,000 of its trust funds in the Anglo-French loan of $500,000,000, Olga H. S. Walsh, Chicago, holder of a $2,000 policy in the Mutual, began an injunction suit in federal court, Monday.

The insurance company, Charles A. Peabody, its president; the directors, members of the Anglo-French credit loan commission, J. P. Morgan individually, and J. P. Morgan & Co. were named as defendants.

Frank S. Monnet, former attorney general of Ohio, who prosecuted the anti-trust suits in Ohio against the Standard Oil company, is attorney for the plaintiff.

The petition, which was filed by Mrs. Walsh in person, sets forth that among the thousands of policyholders in the Mutual Life Insurance company are many persons of various nationalities, and that the investment of the trust funds of these policyholders in the Anglo-French loan would tend to produce antagonisms among the policyholders, which might lead to disrupting the company and thereby depreciate the value of her interest in the company.

In the language of the bill, the court is informed that the solvency of the company and the conservation of the reserve fund depends on the good will of the policyholders, and no part of the assets of the company should be loaned or invested in the securities of any of the warring nations, or used for the purpose of abetting existing wars.

The bill asks that the officers of the company be restrained from directly or indirectly investing its trust funds in the loan, or from investing its trust funds or suffering any of its assets to be used for the purpose of aiding the manufacture of munitions of war, aeroplanes, submarines or any naval outfit or appliances to be used by the English or French nations for belligerent purposes. It further asks that J. P. Morgan, and J. P. Morgan & Co., be restrained from soliciting or conniving with the officers and directors of the Mutual Life Insurance company, for the purpose of procuring any of its funds to be invested in the $500,000,000 Anglo-French loan.

A similar rule of court is petitioned against the members of the Anglo-French loan commission, Baron Reading, Sir Edward Hopkinson Holden, Sir Henry Robinson Smith, Basil B. Blackett, Octave Homberg and Ernest Mallet.

"Jitney Bus" Is Not Liked By Flint Operators of Automobiles.

Flint—In an attempt to do away with the term "jitney bus," as associated with automobiles carrying passengers in opposition to the street cars, operators of that class of public conveyances in Flint have formed an organization, known as the Safety Auto Service club. The organization is composed of 35 men, who are operating the 5-cent "buses" on the streets. Their avowed purpose in promoting the new "club" is to compel a strict observance of city ordinances and to eliminate the class of drivers who have caused much unfavorable criticism of jitney operators as a whole during the last few months.

Local Option Election Declined. Houghton—At the annual meeting of the Baraga county board of supervisors at L'Anse Monday a petition backed by the Michigan Anti-Saloon league, asking the board to place local option on the county ballot next spring, was voted down 3 to 2.

The liquor interests, represented by Attorney W. J. Galbraith, of Calumet, contended that the petition was defective. The Anti-Saloon league now threatens mandamus proceedings.

TELEGRAPHIC FLASHES

Rome, via Havre—Pope Benedict has asked the belligerent governments to allow war prisoners to abstain from work Sundays. It was stated Friday in the Correspondenza, a semi-official organ.

Indianapolis—James Kirby, president of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, died here Friday. He was operated on Thursday for appendicitis and did not recover from the shock. He was 50 years old.

New York—The first transaction in the $500,000,000 Anglo-French five-year 5 per cent bonds on the New York stock exchange was for the amount of $10,000 at 98. The bonds, "when issued," were listed on the stock exchange for the first time Friday.

San Francisco—While no damage was wrought by Thursday night's earthquake, the people of San Francisco and other bay cities were still nervous Friday. Buildings were rocked and dishes rattled.

Paris—The senate Friday gave final sanction to the Anglo-French loan negotiated in the United States by unanimously passing the bill authorizing the loan, the bonds of which are exempted from the income tax. The bill was passed Thursday by the chamber of deputies.

Hereditary. The baby had finished his bottle of milk, and the proud mother thought it would be a good time to get him to say "mamma," "papa," and "by by." The baby simply gurgled.

"Isn't that perfectly wonderful?" said the mother.

"Well," replied the baby's uncle, "it reminds me very much of the way his father talks when he has been busy with a bottle."

The Kind You Have Always Bought.

THIS is the caution applied to the public announcement of Castoria that has been manufactured under the supervision of Chas. H. Fletcher for over 30 years—the genuine Castoria. We respectfully call the attention of fathers and mothers when purchasing Castoria to see that the wrapper bears his signature in black. When the wrapper is removed the same signature appears on both sides of the bottle in red. Parents who have used Castoria for their little ones in the past years need no warning against counterfeits and imitations, but our present duty is to call the attention of the younger generation to the great danger of introducing into their families spurious medicines. It is to be regretted that there are people who are now engaged in the nefarious business of putting up and selling all sorts of substitutes, or what should more properly be termed counterfeits, for medicinal preparations not only for adults, but worse yet, for children's medicines. It therefore devolves on the mother to scrutinize closely what she gives her child. Adults can do that for themselves, but the child has to rely on the mother's watchfulness. Genuine Castoria always bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

Reminded.

"When the autumnal frosts touch the foliage with tints of red and yellow against the gray sky, doesn't that inspire you to thought?"

Waited for Orders.

A drill foreman in Culebra cut sent a negro to the top of the mast on one of his drills to straighten out a rope which had slipped off the sheave. Just after the man went up the general foreman came along and talked about the job for half an hour. In the mean time the man on top of the drill was forgotten and after the general foreman left he was discovered still roosting on top of the mast. The foreman called to him:

"Aren't you through up there yet?"

"Oh, yes, sir, boss."

"Well, why don't you come down then?"

"You don't tell me to, sir."

Has His Own Cage Now.

"Squabbling and fighting—there's another very frequent cause of divorce," said Prof. L. Watts Ingels in an address before the Cleveland Anti-Divorce league.

"A man had been haled before a Cleveland magistrate for nonsupport or some such fault.

"But let me see," the justice said, "aren't you the man who was married in a cage of wild, man-eating tigers and leopards?"

"Yes, your honor, I'm the man, was the reply.

"Exciting, wasn't it?" said the justice.

"Well, your honor," said the man, "it seemed so then. It wouldn't now!"

Good Times.

Henry Ford, praising the good times, in New York, said:

"The good times are spread the country over. There isn't a spot that hasn't got its share.

"Anybody who can contemplate these times with optimism must have a disposition like the bookkeeper's wife.

"The bookkeeper said one day at dinner:

"Gee, I wish I could get up an appetite for once!"

"Oh, go on, John," said his wife, impatiently. "What do you want an appetite for? It would only give you more dyspepsia."

Case of Must.

"You're not smoking as much as you used to. Did your doctor order you to stop?"

"No, I'm a martyr to fashion."

"What's fashion got to do with smoking?"

"If you saw my wife's dressmaker and milliner bills you wouldn't ask such a foolish question."

An angry man entered the water office of an eastern city the other day and fiercely announced to the clerk:

"Sir, you can send up and take your old gas meter out of my house."

"This is not the gas office."

"It isn't?"

"No, sir; this is the water office."

"Oh, it is! Well, then, send a man up to my house at once and turn the water off! I'm not going to walk a mile and a half for nothing!"

The War Spirit.

A fat "colored Mammy" of the "old school" was hauled into court for throwing her washing board at her neighbor's husband, a "Georgia Cracker" of the "poor white trash" variety.

"Did you strike this man with a washboard?" Judge Broyles asked.

Couldn't Blame It.

The hotel was not a very good one, and the traveling man knew it. Nevertheless they were obliged to go there when they came late at night to the little town. In the middle of the night one of them was dimly conscious that something was wrong. Suddenly he realized that the trouble came from a leaking gas jet.

"Wake up, Bill!" he shouted, shaking his friend violently. "The gas is escaping!"

"Well," growled Bill, "can you blame it?"—Ladies' Home Journal.
